

RESTS IN THE TOMB

Obsequies of the Lamented Monro S. Crosby.

TRIBUTE OF A LOVING FRIEND

Mourning Friends Mingle Their Tears With the Family Whose Strength and Shield Has Passed Away.

The funeral of the late Monro S. Crosby occurred from the residence No. 212 Pontiac street at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Before the hour appointed several hundred of the neighbors and friends gathered at this bereaved home to pay the last tribute of respect to the memory of him whom they had delighted to honor as a man and a friend. The number present, gathered as they were from the offices of professional men, from counting rooms, from public offices, from stores and from great manufacturing establishments, mutually but none the less feelingly testified to the sorrow felt that this life should have gone out while yet in the zenith of its brilliancy.

Nor were the friends who gathered there confined within the boundaries of the city. Other friends from other Michigan towns laid down their daily work that they too might be present to testify to that esteem he had awakened wherever known.

At the hour appointed the Rev. John L. Jackson arose and beside the flower laden casket he turned the pages of the Bible to the 121st Psalm.

In commenting on it, Dr. Jackson said: "What better thing can we do in an hour like this than to enter into the noble sentiment of this Psalm. Let us say as David did: 'I will lift up mine eyes unto the heights from whence cometh my help.' Down here is mystery. Here we question and wonder and sorrow. Up there is a solution of all mystery, an answer to all our questions and comfort in all our anguish. Therefore at a time like this we can but look and trust. Though we may not understand, we can wait until He maketh all things clear. In the mean time we can believe that the Lord is our keeper, the Lord is our shade upon the right hand."

"It is not all dark even here—sweet gleams of light break in upon us from many directions and we feel that death is not altogether the victor. The past is ours. A good man's life once lived can not be taken from us. His words have been spoken. His deeds are accomplished. They are ours and humanity forever. His life lies open before us—clean and upright. That will still speak to us and inspire us on to worthy living when his lips are sealed in death. Prof. Drummond defines life as adaptation to environment. He says a life is full and complete as it touches its environment at many points, drawing from them various channels of delight, strength and usefulness. If this definition of a worthy life as given by Mr. Drummond is the correct one—and every thoughtful mind must see that it is—then our friend, Mr. Crosby, lived such a life. We have known but few men who touched the nobler side of the civilization of today at more points than he. It would seem that almost everything that is honorable ministered to his delight and strength. He was a patriot and interested in the political life of his country. He was a church man. He was a business man. He was a home man."

"In many respects he was a worthy example of a public spirited citizen. He served his countrymen as state senator and twice filled the chair of lieutenant governor. After retiring from this office he still retained his interest in public affairs and according to the light in him worked for the triumph of principles dear to his heart. In commercial life he will be missed in our city. He was financially interested in several of the business enterprises which have added to the prosperity of Grand Rapids. Beyond his individual investments he devoted himself to the general good of the community. Whatever added to the honor and strength of our beloved city had his cordial support and sympathy."

"He was in his work as a Christian and a member of the Fountain Street church that I knew him best. Here again we are impressed with the breadth of his sympathies and versatility of his genius. Every department of church work received his attention. He was one of its trustees and looked carefully after its business interests. He was superintendent of the Sunday school for eighteen years and during that time stood faithfully at his post—a most excellent executive officer, a kind and wise leader. His influence upon scores of young men can never be measured."

"In another respect he was an example to Christian business men. He did not allow other engagements to keep him from the Wednesday evening prayer meeting. With his varied interests demanding his attention, his regular attendance at the mid-week meeting showed in what high esteem he held this religious service. He was greatly devoted to the denomination to which he belonged. He was not content, but honored Christian men of all creeds as witnesses of his work in the Y. M. C. A. of this city. Yet he loved his own denomination and he had the privilege of aiding it in its prosperity. Twice he filled the chair as moderator of the Michigan Baptist state convention and was for years on the board of managers of the American Baptist Missionary union."

"After speaking of his work in politics, in business and in the church, I shrink from lifting the curtain upon the sacredness of his home life. One thing at least ought to be said that would add to the demands of the outside world upon his time and sympathy he did not neglect his family. He was a faithful son, husband and father. His beautiful home was the quiet and happy resting place of his loved ones. He seemed to settle that difficult problem which has come to many busy men and to have meted out to the dead, once at home their due proportion of time and thought while still he devoted himself to the wider duties in the world without."

"In short, he was a life which will not soon be forgotten in this community where he lived from early boyhood. Solomon says of the wise woman: 'Let her own works praise her in the gates.' So we shall allow our brother's own life to speak for itself. We have attempted only to give an outline of the facts of his earthly career. They tell their own story and need no further comment from us. Only this: He was faithful unto death and he has already received the crown of life."

At the conclusion of the doctor's remarks Prof. D'Ooge, dean of the Michigan university and a life long friend of Mr. Crosby, paid a beautiful tribute to him.

On the conclusion of this tribute of a friend to a friend, Mrs. Shedd and L. P. Eddy sang Bishop Newman's beautiful hymn of consolation to the grief-stricken, "Lead On." Softly the words and air of this grandest of all consolatory hymns rose over the bowed heads of not only she who mourned a kind and diligent husband, the children who mourned a loving and wise father, but as well of those who mourned a friend.

When the last note, still lingering, had died away the friends present were given an opportunity to gaze for the last time upon the placid face of the sleeper. Silence then came and as silently turned away. This look was not needed to impress their memories, for that was with them and will remain.

At the conclusion of this last farewell Messrs. Dana B. Shedd, A. J. Daniels, Roger W. Butterworth, Edwin F. Uhl, James H. Campbell and Charles W. Watkins, who had been selected as pallbearers, came forward, tenderly lifted the casket and carried it as tenderly bore it to the house. Following the remains came first the widow leaning on the arm of James, the eldest son, then Ray and Helen. Entering carriage the sad procession wended its way to Valley City cemetery, where in a grassy plot the remains were laid at rest forevermore.

Clay carrying the defense and the prosecuting attorney the people's case. The jury retired at 5 o'clock and at 9 o'clock returned a verdict of guilty. Judge Buringame immediately sentenced Hicks to eight years in Jackson. He is now about 45 years old and has a wife and family. The case will doubtless be appealed.

Dr. C. S. Hazleton Talks About His Appointment.

WILLING TO BE SACRIFICED

Financially it is No Snap—He Will Take it Only for a Short Time—He Did Not Ask for It.

Dr. C. S. Hazleton settled himself back with a pleasant smile as a reporter entered his library last night and congratulated him on his appointment as consul to Milan, Italy.

"Really," said the doctor, "I do not know whether I am to be congratulated or commiserated. As such things go, it is considered a fine place."

"Did you seek the place?"
"I have never had any desire to hold government positions, but this was sort of thrown at me, and I guess I will agree to take it for a short time."

"Does a short time mean four years?"
"No. Four years is a long time. Life is short, and I think too much of Grand Rapids to go to Italy for four years if I were made minister to that country. Six months will be a long time."

"What are the emoluments of the position?"
"I cannot say. Such positions usually mean a financial sacrifice. Milan is an inland town and there is little to do there, so the pay will not be large. But Milan is a pleasant place to live and I do not object to it for a short time."

"Had you expected the appointment?"
"Yes, I rather thought something of the kind would come this way. In politics it is necessary to see that those places are properly distributed. It is a compliment to the town. It makes the boys in the neck of the woods feel as if they were in it. If I can and the cause any by taking the place for a short time I am willing to make the sacrifice."

Returns for a Day's Visit.
The Rev. St. Burford, formerly rector of St. Mark's church, has been in Detroit this week attending, as a delegate, the annual council of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew's. Mr. Burford writes to his old time friend, Prof. C. G. Swensberg, that he is coming to Grand Rapids today. He will be in town one day only, as he is on his way to the White City to see the big fair. Mr. Burford has promised the John of Trinity church to preach for him Sunday. There is no doubt that the popular rector's old-time friends will test the capacity of the building he speaks in, as many will desire to meet and hear him.

His Body in the River.
The body of a man about 55 years of age was found floating in the river back of the Hydraulic company's plant on North Canal street yesterday afternoon. Workmen along the river identified it as the body of James White, for many years foreman in M. L. Saxe's elevator. Coroner Bradish was called and ordered the body taken to O'Brien Bros' undertaking rooms to await investigation. No one seems to know about White's family. He has been out of work for some time past and probably committed suicide.

Fire From Explosion.
The explosion of a gasoline stove caused a fire in the residence at No. 333 South Division late yesterday afternoon, which spread to the one adjoining, owned by Dr. G. B. Johnson and occupied by James Lee. Mrs. George Pickell owned the building at No. 333, which was occupied by George Calkins. This building was damaged $1,000 and the furniture $500. Dr. Johnson's building was damaged $200 and Lee's furniture was scorched to the extent of $500. An alarm was turned in at 4:38 from box No. 343.
